The European Geothermal Congress

is the event which brings together the entire European Geothermal sector, and attracts many from further afield.

EGC 2016 will provide a stage to present and discuss new developments in the science, technology, industry, and policy of geothermal energy on our continent.

The congress is not one single event, but a series. Hosting a combination of events for different stakeholders creates a unique opportunity for those working in different aspects of geothermal, whether academic, industrial or societal, to come together.

The congress continues the series of European geothermal events, the most recent of which have been EGC2013 in Pisa, Italy, EGC 2007 in Unterhaching, Germany, EGC 2003 in Szeged, Hungary, and EGC 1999 in Basel, Switzerland.
